LOMBARDO HELD.

Bonds Fixed at $2,000—Taken to Jail to Await Trial.

Thursday morning in police court Vincent Lombardo, who was arrested Tuesday in Boston, was arraigned before Judge William A. Arnold, charged with assault with intent to kill Philip Pagano in this city April 11, 1939. When the testimony of one witness was taken the court found probable cause and bound him over to the next term of the superior court for Windham county under bonds of $2,000.

Officially here experienced in bringing the case, as efficient interpreters could not be obtained, but at last Aurelio Colletti was sworn in to do the work. According to the complaint, Lombardo was charged with committing an assault with intent to murder upon Philip Pagano on April 11, 1939, by cutting him with a razor in the neck. As the interpreter could not translate the word guilty and the court was satisfied that the accused was familiar with the charge, the court entered a plea of not guilty.

Pagano was then called to the stand and said that he knew Lombardo and he had seen him on April 11, 1939, which was Easter Sunday. He said that he had gone to a house on Jackson place to visit and had met him there. He had been playing on his harmonica for a time when Lombardo suggested that they play a game for the beer. An argument arose a few moments later, Lombardo thinking that he was not getting his fair share of the wet goods. Mrs. Lombardo came down stairs and he had told her that he did not want to have any trouble, so they decided to go home. Lombardo was there when they had left. As they were passing along Valley street, at the end of Temple street, Lombardo ran up from behind and struck him with a razor, inflicting a bad gash on his cheek and throat, and cutting his coat. His wife screamed, but grabbed hold of Lombardo, but was not able to retain her hold. Pagano then gave chase, following Lombardo as far as No. 4 mill of the American Thread company, where he lost track of him.

In his own behalf Lombardo tried to recite a long story of jealousy caused by a position at Storrs with a contractor. When asked whether he had seen Pagano or not, he replied that he did not care to answer.

Judge Arnold then found probable cause and held him for the next term of the superior court under bonds of $2,000, and in default of that sum he was taken to Brooklyn jail to await trial.

received while attending a fire in her yard Wednesday, was a former resident of this city.

Mrs. Hall was born in New York city 34 years ago, a daughter of James Lowden, and until her marriage to Mr. Hall lived in that city. Following her marriage she lived in this city for a number of years and a few years ago moved to Colchester, selling her home on Walnut street to Charles de Villiers. She is survived by a daughter, Jennie, aged 11 years, and a stepson, Charles Hall, both living at home.

SUMTER FLAG STORY

Doubted by James Harries, Who Saw Original Flag.

The telegraphic despatch sent out from Lowell under date of April 12, published in Thursday's Bulletin, relative to the present owner and location of the flag that flew over Fort Sumter 50 years ago Wednesday, when that fortress was stormed, must be erroneous, according to one of Windham's well known citizens.

In 1882 James Harries and the late Julius Pinney, both of this city, were collecting relics through the south, and while in Charleston, S. C., they were privileged to see what was left of the original flag that flew over Fort Sumter, a piece about two feet in size, showing a portion of the union, and the small end of cloth was kept under a strict guard and carefully kept from the view of the vulgar gaze of the general public. Mr. Harries stated on Thursday afternoon that he and Mr. Pinney touched the sacred emblem and bagged for a small piece of it, but the custodians of the relic would not even permit it to pass out of their hands and kept it hidden away secretly. When asked who had the flag, Mr. Harries said that he could not recall the names of the three men, but that it certainly was not Charles Cowley.
